Care That Meets You Where You Are

Before the Epilepsy Foundation Texas Mobile Clinic ever hit the road, it was already connecting someone to care. While the Mobile Clinic was being wrapped, a woman working next door to the auto shop spotted the EFTX van and thought of her husband, Dakota, who had been struggling to access the epilepsy care he needed. She reached out and connected him with EFTX Clinic Manager Patrick Rocha.

After being diagnosed with epilepsy, Dakota had been experiencing seizures as often as once a week. When he later lost his job, he also lost his health insurance and access to his medication. Unsure of what to do next, Dakota called Patrick. That phone call connected him with EFTX, where he was able to become a patient, see one of our physicians, and regain access to his medication. Now, he will continue receiving care through the Mobile Clinic.

Dakota's path to EFTX began almost by chance, but his circumstances are exactly why the Mobile Clinic was created: to help remove barriers that can stand between Texans living with epilepsy and the care they need.

As the nation's first mobile epilepsy clinic, the clinic is equipped with EEG technology, in-person and telehealth capabilities, and trained staff to bring specialized epilepsy services directly into communities across Texas. More importantly, it gives EFTX the ability to reach people who may otherwise struggle to access consistent care. For patients like Dakota, that means care doesn't have to feel out of reach. We can meet them where they are.

Thank you to everyone who helped make the Mobile Clinic possible, and to our community for continuing to support EFTX as we work to bring care closer to Texans living with epilepsy.
